As a frequent traveler on a 700 mile stretch of I-65, my focus is on road conditions. When traffic is backed up for what appears to be miles ahead, I want to be able to tune in to the designated radio station to know 1)what, 2)why, 3)how long the anticipated wait, and 4) alternate travel routes. If I want to know about local attractions or weather advisories, give me optional channels to listen to rather than putting all that information into a motorist's worst nightmare. Get yourself behind the wheel of your car and do some reality based problem solving on what travelers need in real-time information, not what special interest groups would like to flood this limited broadcast band with to promote local tourism, etc.
